

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A scanning method for adjusting Y-axis modulation transfer function, suitable for use in a scanner. The scanner performs at least one stepping movement between two neighboring pixels. Each stepping movement requires a shifting time to move the chassis 5 to a fixed position. The scanning method thus generate a shutter signal which lasts a shutter time after the surge of a transmission gate signal is generated.